

Consultation on changes to the main river map for Wales - Decision

Detail of Decision

After a 6 week consultation period, we have decided to proceed with a proposed change to the main river map for Wales by demaining a section of Morfa Brook in Bridgend. We will be making this change to the main river map for Wales under section 194C of the Water Resources Act 1991 (as amended).

How to view the change

The main river map can be viewed here by selecting the main river map layer from the detailed view: main river map.

The proposed change to the main river map at Morfa Brook, Bridgend can be seen here in the consultation document.

How to challenge the decision (appeal)

If you disagree with this decision you can appeal to Welsh Government. If you wish to make an appeal, you may do so by submitting your appeal to: FloodCoastalRisk@gov.wales

You must make the appeal by the 28 November 2019.

Publishing the change to the main river map for Wales

If there are no appeals received, the main river map for Wales will be formally changed on the 29 November 2019 (six weeks from the day after the decision was made).

If any appeal is submitted, the main river map will remain unchanged until the appeal is determined.
